CHECKING THE FINANCES

Frankfort, Ky., May—Expenditure of the $150,000 appropriated by the last legislative session for an audit of the state's affairs would be unjustifiable and unnecessary was the opinion expressed by Nat H. Sewell, State Inspector and Examiner, when asked his views on the suggestion of the Franklin County Taxpayers League, which recently requested Governor Laffoon to direct such an audit and suggested that it be conducted by Mr. Sewell.

Should a firm of expert accountants be employed to conduct such an audit they would go right back over the ground, examine the same records and audit the same accounts which the office of the State Inspector and Examiner has inspected in the last 16 months, Mr. Sewell said. "Every department, agency and commission that disburses or receives state funds has been, or will be carefully checked and closely audited before the close of the present year," said the State Inspector. "An additional audit covering the same ground would be a needless expense and could not serve any useful purpose." More than 50 reports of audits were compiled with recommendations and filed in 1932.

These reports have gone deeply into all phases of departmental activity, and in some cases cover 10 to 15 years in order to get the proper background from which to draw conclusions as to efficiency of the system being followed, it was pointed out.

A digest of all reports of the Inspector and Examiner's office will be prepared and filed with the Governor at the close of the present year, Mr. Sewell said.

"All this work has been done without additional expense to the state and has been intensive and searching. Less than the $22,500 a year appropriated to maintain the office has been expended in the entire operations of this department."

In addition to the thorough examination of all agencies of state government, records of all 120 counties of the state have been carefully checked at least once and more than half of them have been examined a second time, it was said.

COUNTY MERCHANTS ORGANIZE

About twenty Morgan county merchants met at the courthouse on Tuesday morning of this week and organized the Morgan County Merchants Association. H. R. McWhorter of the Boyd county association was present and told the assembled merchants the purposes and work of the Kentucky Retail Merchants Association and pointed out the danger of the proposed state sales tax.

After a round table discussion, the Morgan County Merchants Association was organized, membership being open not only to retail merchants but to other business men and women as well. Dues were fixed at $3 a year for each member, $2 of which goes to the state association while the other $1 remains to carry on the work of the local association.

The following officers were elected: president, W. L. Murray; vice president, J. L. Blair; secretary, Rosenbroug; treasurer, S. S. Franklin. The officers are also members of the board of directors. Other directors are T. H. Cuskey, Lucian B. Reed, O. B. Amott, and Mrs. Anty McClain. Additional directors, representing different sections of the county, will be elected at the next meeting of the association, which will meet when called by the president.

All Morgan county business men and women are urged to join this association and help fight the battle against the proposed state sales tax, as well as to cooperate on other work which is in the interest of the business men and their customers. Dues should be paid to either the secretary or the president of the association. Membership receipts are being printed and may be obtained soon from the secretary.

"WHY NOT?"

We all agree that something should be done to end this depression, and many agree our monetary system is the cause of all our troubles. When there are so many places in the Bible where usury is condemned, and our Constitution plainly tells us "Congress shall have the power to coin money and regulate the value thereof," wouldn't it be a good plan to trust our money system with our United States Government? Surely no one can say our postal system is not a success. Why not a government banking business. (Mrs.) Bess R. Hahbert

WEDDING BELLS

The wedding bells have been ringing almost continuously in our community the past week.

Mr. Chahner Allen and Miss Selma McClain drove over to Salyersville Wednesday May 17, called at the M. E. parsonage and Rev. Rhayl tied the knot. The young couple thought to evade the young people and spent Thursday evening with relatives at White Oak. However, some one carried the news and they were surprised at White Oak by a large gathering of their friends. Friday morning they left for Middletown, Ohio, where they expect to make their future home.

Mr. Allen is the son of D. B. Allen of this place, but has been in Middletown the past few years. He is well known to our young people here, being the brother of our Ex-Tax Commissioner, Miss Ethel Allen.

The bride is the accomplished and promising daughter and only child of Mr. and Mrs. Ollie McClain on East Court street. She has been a faithful student in the Morehead Normal and lacks only a few credits of having her life certificate. She has been a successful teacher, being employed the past year in our home school.

The many friends of the newly wedded pair can strew nothing but roses in their pathway.

McCLAIN—MAY

Mr. Stanley May and Miss Mildred McClain visited the Rhayl parsonage in Salyersville Monday evening and the parson tied the nuptial knot. They stopped with relatives at White Oak and were greeted by a goodly bunch of their friends. They are now at home on Glen avenue with Mr. and Mrs. Tom May.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Tom May, prominent citizens of our town. Stanley is in the employ of The May Wholesale Grocery Company.

The bride's parents were former residents of our town. Her father, Gus McClain, now resides at Lenox. Mildred was the efficient assistant in the Jennie May Cafe and is respected by all who know her.

The many friends of this young couple wish them a bright and happy future.

SKAGGS—WILLIAMS

There came a surprise to this community last Saturday—the wedding of Miss Muttie Skaggs of this place and Carl Williams of Williams creek.

Mr. Williams is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Williams and a civil, bright young man of 24 years, and has the good recommendation of the neighborhood in which he lives.

Miss Skaggs is the accomplished daughter of our largest farmer, L. H. Skaggs of this place. She has been a teacher in the schools of Morgan county for a number of years and is loved by all who know her. Her many friends wish her much joy and happiness in her married life.

They will make their future home with Mrs. Williams' parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Skaggs at Elkfork.

A Friend

STAMPER—DUNNIGAN

Sunday morning at seven o'clock there was an unique home wedding in the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Stamper at Grassy, when they gave away their beautiful daughter, Anna, to Wayne Dunnigan of Camel City, Rev. Buddy Denton officiating. Mr. Dunnigan is a promising young man in the employ of the highway department.

The bride is an accomplished girl with a sweet personality.

The many friends of the happy couple are blending their well wishes of Maytime fragrance with the sweet promising June of the future.

Sunday Wedding

John L. Ferguson of Caney, aged 89, and Elizabeth Watkins, aged 87, of West Liberty, were married at the court house on Sunday just before noon, by Elder John Helton, before a large crowd of friends and spectators.

Too Bad

West Liberty went down to defeat Sunday at Darbuck to the score of twentythree to three.

No illibis folks! Just not in condition to play. The boys went to Darbuck to play a real team without even a relief pitcher, so what would one expect. But let's hope the team makes a comeback by taking both games of the double header at Jackson next Sunday.

The President's Peace Message

We take off our hat to the man who does things. Franklin D. Roosevelt has been President less than three months and already a special committee of the federal reserve reports a general improvement in business conditions throughout the country. The average citizen everywhere is forgetting his fear and depression and is facing the future full of hope and good cheer.

And not only are 12,000,000 Americans looking in hope and confidence at the whole world is turning to him for leadership.

Roosevelt's great telegraphic message to the heads of the nations of the world has brought instant response from the great ones of the earth acclaiming his program.

His message is a spectacular piece of diplomacy. Casting aside historic precedent in foreign affairs, as he has done so extensively in other matters, Mr. Roosevelt addressed directly the Presidents and Sovereigns of foreign nations, instead of dealing through the ministers of foreign affairs. His language likewise has a quality of directness unusual in diplomatic correspondence.

The President's telegram is important because it comes at a very critical juncture in world affairs. Europe is in fact standing on the brink of new disaster. No overt act, no specific change, can be cited which explains the present condition. But distrust is widespread, popular antagonisms are running high and friction between governments has reached a dangerous point. Some powerful and disinterested force making for agreement must be brought to bear soon or the present efforts in that direction will break down entirely.

Substantially the President told the rulers that agreement must be reached on a specific plan of disarmament, preferably the Macdonald plan, to include the fixing of maximum limits for European military forces, and the abolition of purely offensive weapons. Further, a definite non-aggressive must be made. In addition to this plan, however, the President sent a warning that any strong nation which refused such an agreement would be branded as one responsible for the failure of peace efforts.

The measures endorsed are those long accepted in theory at Geneva as desirable. Had the United States favored a non-aggressive pact some years ago the present confusion might have been avoided to some extent. Taken in conjunction with the statement of Norman Davis that America will sign a consultative pact—a vanguard of alliance to defend the status quo—this approval of a non-aggressive pact marks a profound extension of American policy to cooperate in European problems.

The warnings to other nations which are frustrating these efforts we may consider a direct threat against Germany. No other nation has been so active recently in delaying progress toward disarmament. And even Hitler, in his radio address heard here and throughout the world declares that Germany will go as far as any nation for disarmament.

Japan, to be sure, has played fast and loose with certain international treaties, but her aggression in North China does not at present imperil the peace of the western world.

President Roosevelt's personal and direct intervention may help materially. There will be time later to clarify our national policies as to just what "peace" we are prepared to help guarantee.—Winchester Sun.

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION Frankfort, Kentucky May 19, 1933

TO: HIGH SCHOOL PRINCIPALS
RE: ACCREDITED RELATIONS
The Committee on Accrediting of Secondary Schools met in Lexington, May 6, 1933. The West Liberty High School was accredited Class B.

High schools are accredited annually. Your school will be reaccredited from year to year so long as it continues to meet the standards for accredited schools.

Inform the members of your Board of Education that your school is accredited. Acquaint them with the needs of your school and the standards for accrediting.

I offer my congratulations and tender those of the Committee as well. Very truly yours,

Mark Goldman, Secretary
Committee on Accrediting of Secondary Schools.

May 11, 1933

Mr. W. L. Carpenter,
West Liberty, Kentucky.
Dear Mr. Carpenter:

The last meeting of the Accrediting Committee was held May 6. At that time the Committee canvassed your organization report and found that you have four full-time teachers employed. It was further found that you are the only member of the faculty who is an actual college graduate.

I was instructed by the Committee to send you a letter of warning to the effect that you should hasten that your teachers be college graduates as soon as they possibly can procure their degrees. There is a great surplus of college graduates in this state who have certificates and are not employed. There is no excuse for an accredited high school not having all members of its faculty college graduates.

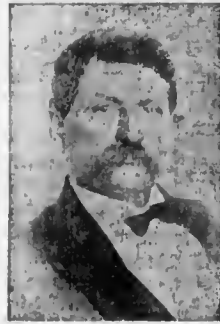

Very truly yours,
Mark Goldman, Secretary
Committee on Accrediting of Secondary Schools.

To Correct Mistake

Licking Valley Courier: I wish to correct the mistake in your paper last week in regard to the death of my brother, Howard Perry, who was killed by a car driven by J. W. Day. Your paper stated that Howard started to cross the road in front of the car. This is not true. He was walking along on the right hand side of the road when the death car came along and hit him, dragging him a distance of 120 feet. Howard's wife's name is Catha. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Hanes of Sharpshurg. He is survived by father, one sister and three brothers.

Respectfully,

KELLY PERRY, a brother

FOR JAILER

To the voters of Morgan County: Ladies and gentlemen: I have concluded to place my announcement for the office of jailer, subject to the action of the Democratic party at the August primary, 1933, in the Licking Valley Courier, and I ask all of you for your support which I wish to say will be highly appreciated. I am able to make you as good a jailer or better than any who are making the race. I will promise to take care of your public property in the best manner that I know how. This will be the last race that I shall ever make on account of my age, which is seventyone years. I think that I'm entitled to this office this time. I am a taxpayer of this county and a citizen who wishes to see the best done for his home county. I think today that I have the honor, or should have, of helping to bring the high salaries down to a common basis, and I feel that all the good citizens will believe this and I want you also to give our Fiscal Board credit and praise for their last vote. It was a deathly blow to those who were getting and fighting for higher salaries. I hope the men will not think hard of me for contending and fighting the way I did in order to bring the laboring citizens from under the bondage. Our homes are under heavy debts and we cannot possibly redeem them and also pay the high salaries which we have been forced to pay. I feel today that in the next four years to come we will be able to pay our officers the salary which is set and also make a large payment on our debts.

Now, I am asking all the voters of Morgan county to pick out the best man available on the track and vote for them regardless of kinfolk, friends or foes. We have all got to get our shoulders against the wheel and help roll it out of the mud. I'm now in battle with about ten or twelve of my countrymen who are throwing clubs at me, although you needn't think strange of that, the best tree in the orchard has always got the most clubs around it.

I am not able to work on a farm as I have been and would like for all my friends to stand by me. I want to visit all your homes and talk with you about my election, but if I should fall in the effort to see you all, I beg of you to remember on that day, and if I am elected, you will find that I will do my utmost to serve you in the best and cheapest manner in which I know how. I wish to say that I am running single handed. I don't belong to any club or any clan, and I believe if any should be found to be forming in any states or anything, it should be made public and destroyed for this which I am speaking of has already put our county in the condition it is in today. Why not run fair races and let the best man win?

Thanking you all for your attention in reading this notice for you know just what I stand for. I'm the poor man's friend and I will contend for the taxpayers' rights as long as I know how. Anywhere I am needed in behalf of the poor man, hard working taxpayer, who want their homes out from under bondage, just send for me and I'm ready to do my utmost.

I hope the men who are just going out of office will try to, if collected, "save" in the place of waste, all of our little old homes even the poor and poverty stricken, which beats none mightily bad. Voters lets fight for them until we win.

Homes Found For Children

Of the sixteen children placed by Miss Anita Casseberry, Field Agent for the Kentucky Children's Home Society, Lyndon, Ky., six remained in Morgan county. Six were placed in Magoffin county, three in Wolfe county and one in Breathitt county.

Mr. Henry Cole gave them a bountiful dinner and later in the day they were taken to Malone where they were cared for by Mrs. Conley, Mrs. McGuire and Mrs. Hamilton.

The Home still is overcrowded, any person interested in taking one of these orphans at least for the summer, can do so by getting word to the Cole Hotel, West Liberty.

The children go to homes on trial and may be returned at the foster parents discretion. The work being done by the Home is non sectarian.

W. G. Oakley—Memorial

In loving remembrance of my beloved husband and father who departed this life August 10, 1930.

The depth of our sorrow we cannot tell.

Of the loss of one we loved so well. And while he sleeps a peaceful sleep, His memory we shall always keep.

By his loving wife and children

All Day Working

There will be an all day working at the Salyer cemetery on Saturday, May 27. Everyone is urged to bring working tools and help. Bring a basket of eats for the noonday lunch.

A TALKING BOOK

Something quite rare in now books is a "talking book" which will be exhibited at the Century of Progress Exposition, Chicago, by the Office of Education. It may be seen and heard in the Department of Interior display at the Federal Building on the Fair Grounds.

This interesting exhibit is bound in red leather and lies on a chromium plated reading desk. On the quarter hour the cover opens slowly and the pages turn one after another revealing a series of brilliantly colored illustrations which are explained in clear words spoken from concealed loudspeakers on either side of the book by U. S. Commissioner of Education William John Cooper. The "talk" tells the work and service of the Federal Office of Education.

The talking time of the book is two and a half minutes. It closes automatically until the time next for it to talk.

While the application of this idea to education can only be conjectured, it is pointed out by the Office of Education that it reduces eye strain to a minimum.

LADIES AID MEETS

The Ladies Aid Society of the Canaan City Union Church met with Mrs. D. P. Peyton Thursday, May 11.

The hostess read the Scripture lesson and Miss Sallie Minor offered prayer. The secretary, Miss Sallie Minor, read the minutes of the last meeting, and the treasurer, Mrs. M. R. Elam, called the roll to which was responded with little verses.

The afternoon was spent peeling quills.

Those present were: Miss Sallie Minor, Mrs. W. T. Stamper, Mrs. Tom Davis, Mrs. Mike Benton, Mrs. Asa Carter, Mrs. Wanda Lewis, Mrs. M. R. Elam, Mrs. Leonidas Peyton, Mrs. G. W. Leslie, Mrs. M. R. Elam, Mrs. Ida Patton and Mrs. D. P. Peyton.

The hostess assisted by Mrs. Leonidas Peyton, served delicious refreshments of angel food cake and grape juice. The afternoon was enjoyed by all. The next meeting will be with Mrs. G. W. Leslie.

COUNTY AGENTS' COLUMN

Reviews Work

The services which the College of Agriculture of the University of Kentucky renders were recently reviewed in a radio address by Dean Thomas P. Cooper. He sketched the work of the college in teaching agriculture and home economics; of the Experiment Station in its research and investigations, and of the Agricultural extension Division in carrying the work of improvement into practically every community of the state.

Eight hundred men and women have graduated from the College of Agriculture. Most of these graduates still live in Kentucky. Many of them are on the farm and in the home; others occupy important and responsible positions as teachers in agricultural schools, agricultural extension agents, and home demonstration agents, and many others are connected with various business enterprises that have to do with agricultural affairs.

The Experiment Station has been of service for 48 years. During that period the results of its research work have added to the wealth of the state and assisted large numbers of farmers to better economic conditions.

Experiment substations are maintained at Quicksand and Princeton, to render service to the eastern and western parts of the state respectively; while general problems are handled at the main station at Lexington. Experiment fields also are operated on the principal soil types of the state.

In addition to investigation and research, the Experiment Station administers laws regulating the sale of commercial fertilizers and feeds, and the creamery license and pure seed laws, all of which protect buyers by requiring honest labels, weights and information regarding the value of the product.

The Public Service Laboratories at the Experiment Station perform a great amount of work relating to the analysis and investigations required by the State Board of Health, the various health units and many physicians throughout the state. Some idea of its work may be gained from the fact that 105,000 examinations were made in one year.

Publications giving the work and results of the Experiment Stations are in wide demand, and are sent upon request to thousands of persons. Four hundred or more requests are frequently received in a day for publications and for information and advice on individual farm problems.

Dean Cooper pointed out that the story of agricultural extension work in Kentucky is a fascinating one. "It is tremendous in its size and import," he said. "It's contacts, through 4-H club boys and girls, with 900 communities in 90 counties and reaching more than 15,000 farm homes, result in better rural living, the development of community spirit and enterprizes and in a better economic situation."

It is through the agricultural extension division that the United States Department of Agriculture and the College of Agriculture jointly employ county agricultural and home demonstration agents in the counties of the state.

More Buying Power

Increasing the purchasing power of farmers is the declared purpose of the new Farm Act. The Act bears the title "To relieve the existing national economic emergency by increasing agricultural purchasing power."

Several methods for bringing about an increase in rural buying power are provided for in the Act. Just what is to be done this season will be determined in hearings called by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace.

The alternative methods made possible by the Act are:

(1) The Secretary of Agriculture may arrange with individual farmer to reduce their acreage or production by a specified amount, and to compensate them either by paying rentals or by making direct benefit payments. This would be immediate relief, with only the participating producers receiving the benefits.

(2) By entering into marketing agreements with processors and others to reduce wasteful and price-depressing competition, excessive handling charges, and so on, the Secretary may bring about better prices to farmers.

(3) Cotton growers who reduce their acreage at least 30 percent can be given an option contract for an equivalent amount of cotton, from stocks now owned by the Federal Government—more than two million bales. If cotton prices rise, the grower may have his optioned cotton sold, and take the profit. In no case would the grower be liable for losses incurred in holding this cotton. This plan may be used either alone, or in conjunction with rental or other benefits for land taken out of cultivation.

Funds to pay rental and benefits payments would come initially from the Federal treasury. Subsequently they would be derived from an adjustment tax levied on the first processing of a basic commodity.

The basic commodities named in the Act are wheat, cotton, hogs, field corn, rice, tobacco, and milk and its products; but the Secretary may exclude from the operation of the Act any of these commodities if its inclusion would not further the purpose of the Act.

Cucumber Beetles

There are two kinds of cucumber beetles. One is colored pale green with black spots; the other, brilliant orange with black stripes. The spotted cucumber beetles are general feeders and, although they are capable of doing serious damage, the fact that they leave the cucumbers when other food offers makes them much less feared than the striped beetles, which stay on the cucumbers and other vine crops all summer long.

Cucumber beetle injury starts when the seedlings begin coming up. At this time the beetles that have spent the winter in all kinds of garden trash, emerge and go down into the cracks the seedlings have made, to feed and more seriously, to lay eggs. These eggs hatch into cream-colored, brown-headed larva, which continue the damage the adults have begun, namely the girdling or sometimes the total destruction of the seedlings. When the number of the larvae is large the shortage in stand is immediately noticed, but sometimes a satisfactory number of plants seem to survive only to wilt and die when blooming time comes. Plants that die at this time are observed to have gnawed stems and roots unable to cope with the burden of blooming and fruit setting, and, too, with the dry weather that usually sets in at that time.

Although it is the belief of gardeners that "the cucumbers died in one night," it is easily seen that the damage began weeks before. In fact, while the seedlings were emerging, to control the beetles gardeners must begin their campaign at that time, too.

Inasmuch as the damage done by both adults and the larvae is by eating tissue, their control is through a poison that needs to be specially applied so as to reach the parts to be protected. Again, a form of poison must be chosen that will not harm tender foliage.

The most satisfactory control for cucumber beetles is a dust made by mixing a pound of calcium arsenate and 20 pounds of gypsum.

Calcium arsenate is obtainable of any dealer who handles insecticides. Gypsum in its pure form is somewhat more difficult to get locally, but a quite satisfactory substitute is what is called "gypsum plaster" or "fiber plaster," which dealers in building materials always carry. All that is required is to screen out the hair.

A duster is not needed to apply this dust, but merely a sifter made of cheesecloth or by punching nail holes in a tin can.

Dusting should begin when the soil over the middle of the hills begins to heave, at which time the ground should be whitened. Three days, the next dusting should be made, and in three days again, and so on until at least ten dustings have been made, always in the middle of the hill, some of the dust falling into the cracks and some of it washed down by rains. Ten dustings will give 30 days' protection, but as many as 21 dustings have been given with profit.

A circular, Number 262, has just been issued that describes the control of the cucumber beetle, in detail. A copy may be secured by addressing the College of Agriculture at Lexington.

Differ in Cows

A cow owned by a member of the Boyd County Dairy Herd Improvement Association returned $36.62 above the cost of feed in a year, while her stable mate returned only $16.97. Yet the owner thought one cow was about as good as the other, until he kept a record of their production.

One cow produced 9,623 pounds of milk containing 388 pounds of butterfat and the other 6,982 pounds of milk and 281 pounds of butterfat. Their feed was approximately the same, $25.98 for the better one and $35.48 for the other. For each dollar spent for feed one returned $1.98 and the other $.40.

The foregoing facts are put forward by the dairy division of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky to illustrate the value of testing cows in order to know their actual production. It is not possible to look at a cow and know her production.

Cemetery Waking

There will be an all day working on May 27th, on the cemetery at Ezel. Everybody having friends buried there bring your lunch and come.

Mrs. J. R. Carr, secretary

Kentucky Farm Radio Program

The College of Agriculture will broadcast the following farm radio program from the University of Kentucky extension studios of WLAS the week of May 29. Each program will begin at 12:45, central standard time.

May 29—Weeds, E. C. Vaughn. Producing strawberries economically, J. S. Bondurant.

May 30—Management of the growing flock, Stanley Catron. Summer care of roses, N. R. Elliott.

May 31—Dusting in review, L. A. Horlacher. Observations from 300 farm records, W. L. House.

June 1—Cherries in Kentucky, C. S. Waltman. Emergency hay and pasture crops, R. J. Kinnex.

June 2.—What farm folks are asking, L. C. Brewer.

CLARA BOW COMING

An event of importance to local theatergoers will be the opening on May 30, 1933, at the Rex Theatre of "Call Her Savage," Clara Bow's first Fox starring vehicle. The screen play was especially prepared for the famous red-head by Edwin Burke, and is an adaptation of Tiffany Thayer's much discussed novel, "Call Her Savage."

Appropriately enough, three leading men will be seen opposite Clara. They are Gilbert Roland, as her half-breed sweetheart; Monroe Owsley, as her wealthy husband, and Anthony Jowett, youthful adventurer who has not the courage to attempt to tame her pagan nature.

Others in the cast include Willard Robertson and Estelle Taylor as her parents and Wehlon Hegburn, as her mother's Indian wooer. John Francis Dillon directed.

Card of Thanks

The bereaved family wish to thank our many friends in the death of our beloved son, husband and brother, Howard Perry. We especially wish to thank Mr. Murray, L. L. Williams, G. W. Lytle, Nokie Phillips, Barman Gevelon, Wesley Ferguson, D. S. Williams, Bro. Harlan Murphy and Bro. M. B. Whit for their kindness and assistance.

Time and again I am told—by my own organization and by others—that I penalize myself by quality.

Friendly critics protest our putting into the Ford V-8 what they call "twenty-year steel." They say such quality is not necessary; the public does not expect it; and that the public does not know the difference anyway.

But I know the difference.

I know that the car a man sees is not the car he drives—he drives the car which the engineer sees. The car which is seen, comprises beauty of design, color and attractive accessories,—all desirable, of course. The best evidence that we think so is that they are all found on the Ford V-8.

But these are not the car. The car proper, which is the basis of all the rest, is the type of engine and its reliability; the structure of chassis and body, ruggedly durable; the long thought and experiment given to safety factors; the steady development of comfort, convenience and economy. These make the car.

A car can be built that will last two or three years. But we have never built one. We want the basic material of our car to be as dependable the day it is discarded as the day it is bought. Ford cars built 15 years ago are still on the road. It costs more to build a durable car—but two items we do not skimp are cost and conscience. A great many things could "get by"—the public would never know the difference. But we would know.

The new Ford V-8 is a car that I endorse without any hesitancy. I know what is in it. I trust our whole thirty years' reputation with it. It is even better than our previous V-8. It is larger, more rugged and mechanically a better job all round.

I readily say this in an advertisement because I know the car will back it up.

Mine Death Causes Listed

The spectacular explosion takes a place well toward the bottom in the list of causes of fatalities in the coal mines of this country. It is the fall of roofs and coal in the mine galleries which takes the heaviest toll. Of the average of 2,125 miners killed each year, 1,182 are killed by the fall of roof material or sidewalls. More than 54,000 other miners are injured seriously enough each year to lose time from their work from the same cause.

Hint for Homemakers

By Jane Ekers

BY using a screen like this you can have a little breakfast nook in your kitchen. You can make the screen yourself of pressed wood boards and decorate it to suit your own taste.

The custard pie will be an even, nice brown when baked if a little sugar is sprinkled over the top just before putting into the oven.

BOB JONES COMMENTS

There are five instincts that are universal. First, there is the instinct that insists upon a god of some kind. Second, there is the instinct of prayer. All men everywhere in the hour of emergency call upon some god for help. Third, there is the instinct of duty. All people have some sense of obligation. Fourth, there is the instinct of sacrifice. In every religion you find this idea of sacrifice. Fifth, there is the instinct of immortality. All men dream of a life to come.

Jesus Christ answers the universal instinct of the race. Do you need a God? Worship Him. He is all the God I want. If this universe should produce a greater God than Jesus I wouldn't know what to do with Him. Do you want to pray? Jesus opens the door to the house of prayer. He says, "Whatsoever you ask in my name you can have." Do you feel a sense of duty? Jesus can give you power to do what you ought to do. He said, "All power is given unto me both in heaven and in earth." Do you believe in sacrifice? Then trust Jesus. He was wounded for our transgressions and bruised for our iniquities. Do you dream of a life to come? Then look up to Him. He said that He has gone to prepare a place for us, and that He is coming again someday to take us home.

I have seen the vista of rolling hills of winding streams and forests with their changing colors. I have seen the sky on a wintry night beset with countless stars. I have caught the odor that floats through tropical islands on a summer evening. I have seen the hand of God sweep the eastern sky with the glory of a dawning day. I have seen Him put His canvas on the western horizon dip his brush in fire and paint the exquisite tints of a golden sunset; but all I have ever seen and heard and felt, cannot compare with the first rapture that will thrill my heart when I look within the celestial city gate.

The worst tragedy the world ever saw took place in the best environment the world ever had. Sin didn't begin in the slums. Sin began in a garden. Adam and Eve used to go to sleep at night in beds of lilies, and as Bob Taylor says, "they breathed air which came filtered through jungles of roses." But they made a mess of their environment.

In every language and dialect in the world there is some word for "ought" or "duty" or "must." Every savage tribe has some word to show that the tribe has some sense of obligation.

"All have sinned and come short of the glory of God," says the Bible. In other words, we have tried to meet our obligations as we have understood them. We tried to hit the bull's eye when we shot, but we missed it. We failed, and we know we failed. No normal human being ever lived, with the exception of Jesus Christ, who did not at some time have some consciousness that he did wrong.

I have a rainbow of hope over the clouds of our past failures. All the stain is on the past. God keeps the future spotlessly white. From this day as long as you live you can succeed in life.

What is success? It is not making money. Men may make money while they succeed, but the making of money is not success. It is possible to succeed and die poor. It is possible to die rich and wind up a life of failure. Success is not climbing the ladder of fame. Men may achieve fame, and fall. Men may travel the lonely obscure road and die unnoticed and unknown, and succeed.

Success is finding out what God wants you to do and do it. God has a plan for every human life. The lawyer who can write over his office, "I am a lawyer by the will of God," is a successful man. The same thing holds with every other profession and with every other business in life. The mother who can rock her baby to sleep at night and say, "I am a housewife and mother by the will of God," is a successful woman.

The secret of success is also the secret of happiness. Every creature that does what God meant for it to do is happy. God made the fish for the sea and the bird for the air. The fish plays in the water because he is at home. The bird sings in the air because the bird is at home. Put the fish in the air and the bird in the water and they die. The reason is that they are out of their God-planned sphere. Every human being who is in the center of the will of God for his life is not only successful, but happy.

Irvine Turner, of Jackson, was in town Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. James Perry spent the week end at Lenox with Mr. and Mrs. New Perry.

J. P. Haney, of Jackson, spent Sunday night with his friends Mr. and Mrs. Will Carter at this place.

Miss Lily Bryant, who had been in high school at Quicksand, is home for her vacation with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Hord.

Our Government —How It Operates

By William Buckart

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

CASUAL visitors to the Capital City of the nation seldom receive suggestions from natives of Washington that they should visit the Department of Agriculture. The native here will freely point out places to see and the things of interest that a tourist "should not miss," but the suggestions almost never include the Department of Agriculture.

It is more easily understood than it appears. Except for the gardens and a greenhouse or two over which the department has supervision, there is little appeal for the tourist in that part of the department located in Washington, large as that section really is.

The answer, simply stated, to the circumstance is that the Department of Agriculture operates the greatest laboratories in the world, but they are scattered throughout the nation that they can be near to the problems they seek to solve. The experimental farms serve to illustrate the point. That farm in your state is located where it is for a very practical reason, the same being that it is attempting to develop some kind of agricultural product of special fitness for the conditions of soil and climate under which you live.

But I would not have you understand that the department has only this method of serving the farmers. Although their work lacks the appeal that is required to attract sightseers, the vast offices of the department in Washington are thoroughly filled with men and women and with equipment as each one of them proceeds to work out some new factor in connection with plant and animal life. People are too prone to think of the department only in connection with wheat and cotton and corn and cattle and hogs, etc. As a matter of fact, its other work is more basic.

Let me relate the circumstance of one office as an illustration. Presiding over it is a small man, a German by birth but an immigrant to America at an early age. He is highly educated, uses many terms in conversation that go far over my humble head, and plods along with his studies.

And what does he study? Peat, peat, bogs, uses of peat, how to use peat lands.

He is recognized throughout the world as an authority on peat, and slowly but surely out of the vast researches that he has made a mass of facts is coming information that will result in utilization of millions of acres of land that is looked upon now by those residing near as not worth the taxes its owners have to pay. It may be interesting to note in this connection that this peat expert has established the value of peat as a fertilizer and that in consequence it won't be many years until truck farmers will be buying peat to mix with the soil of their farms the better to produce their crops.

The individual about whom I have written above is just one cog in a great machine, known in the department as the bureau of chemistry and soils, an agency of earnest men and women seeking facts. Scientists, they are, and scientists they will remain, and while superficially their work may be made the subject of laughter and by-play, agricultural life of America owes much to them.

For instance out of the constant investigation that goes on by that group, we already know that certain kinds of wheat will produce in greater value in Kansas than formerly could be grown in that bread basket of the nation; we know that their soil studies have evolved ways of fertilizing that will break up "hardpan" and subsoils which the farmer despises, and we have learned from them that crops requiring soils free from acid can be grown in sections hitherto held to be areas where such crops were unprofitable.

In other words, the work the scientists do is of the sort that the farmer may not see its value until he suddenly discovers through his farm paper that the experiments have shown it feasible to plant a certain type of seed or to do some other thing that opens a new avenue of profit to him. The chemical exaradations, the soil investigations, and the studies of fertilizers, to mention a few, all lead directly to benefits for those who till the soil and with their produce feed the nation.

It is only a step in one's survey of the department activities from the bureau of chemistry and soils to another section—the bureau of entomology—where the investigations are directed towards means of saving the crops which the other scientists have found can be produced to better advantage. The scientists in the bureau of entomology can tell you about the life history of the potato bug or any other that has been discovered as a parasite on American plant life. And that is more important to the agricultural producers, those scientists can tell you how to defeat the ravage of the insects that are known to be injurious to the crops.

Naturally, too, since they study insects, the same scientists provide the nation's bee-keepers with information about the honey bees, and how to protect them from the dangers that threaten them.

MOUNTAIN BOY

As a result of the nation wide nativity given Martin county by press associations in the recent Mills case, visitors from every where are expected here this summer. One visitor the other day driving his automobile along a little used road, heard something rattle beneath his car, stopped, looked back, and saw a bright metal object lying in the road a short distance behind. It was a worn pilot point lost by some farmer. It was found in a half hour before "Longgreen" came along, and seeing the city man flat on his back under his vehicle by the roadside, stopped and asked what the trouble was. The city man emerged and held up the pilot point. "This blooming thing dropped off my car," he said, "and I've been hunting for half an hour to find out where it belongs."

Mrs. "Longgreen" says: "Yes I'm sure our garden is going to be a success this year." "So soon?" "Yes, the chickens have tasted everything and they are perfectly enthusiastic."

"Longgreen" says that he caught one of his neighbors in a cootie hunt the other day and asked him what he was doing and he replied, "I'm hunting for 'rhythmic bugs.' " "Why do you call them rhythmic bugs?" "Cause they add to my misery, they subtract from my pleasure, they divide my attention and they multiply like the devil."

Mary had a little skirt, So neat, so bright, so airy; It never showed a speck of dirt, But it surely did show Mary.

Half an inch, half an inch, half an inch shorter; The skirts are the same of mother and daughter.

When the wind blows each one of them shows Half an inch, half an inch more than she oughter.
